

Aluminium used to make drinks cans comes from rocks called ores dug up from under the rainforest in countries like Brazil. Recycling these cans reduces the need for new aluminium and helps protect the rainforest. It uses the same amount of energy to make 20 recycled cans as it does to make one can from aluminium ore.